More About Swaziland and the Need

The smallest country in the Southern Hemisphere, Swaziland is a landlocked, independent kingdom about the size of New Jersey.

It's bordered on three sides by the Republic of South Africa, with a 70 mile eastern border with Mozambique, and is about 40 miles from the Indian Ocean.

The climate varies from tropical to near temperate. Drought is a major problem. The terrain is mostly mountains and hills; some moderately sloping plains. A good portion of the land is covered in rocks, boulders and tall green grass.

Farming is a way of life for the Swazi people. Most families grow maize as their main food source. Cattle, goats, and chickens are an important part of every homestead.

The unemployment rate in Swaziland has reached an all time high of 50%, (some say its much higher), with many people struggling to find employment.

The Swazi people eat one meal per day (two if they're lucky), usually consisting of porridge for breakfast and maize and beans for dinner.

Life for the Swazi people consists of a constant struggle to have enough food. The need for cash to buy clothing, pay for school fees, required uniforms and personal needs is always an issue.

In 2015, free primary education became a reality for the first time in Swaziland. However paying for uniforms, shoes and a High School education is still one of the major challenges most families face. Many families must choose between sending their youth onto High School and feeding their families.

Most people in the rural areas of Swaziland live in houses made of mud, rock and stick with thatched roofs. People near the cities live in houses made of brick and cement with roofs made of corrugated metal.

Most rural villages have small trading stores. Larger clothing and grocery stores can be found in the cities. Water is carried from streams or springs, sometimes a great distance. Some have access to running water. Electricity is available in many villages but most people live without because they cannot afford it.

Most Swazi people speak English and classes are generally taught in English. SiSwati is the official language.

The majority of families in third world countries live on less than $2 a day; the average daily income per family in the United States is over $139 a day. If each person gave as little as $0.50 cents per day, poverty could be eliminated!

CLF was birthed in 2004 when God opened our eyes to the needs of His people and our hearts were moved into action. In addition to God showing us the faces of those dying of AIDS and the beautiful children left behind, He has shown us the faces of poverty and despair left in its wake.

We have a burden, with a special focus on caring for Orphans and Widows. We partner with those to whom God directs us, who are already on the front lines fighting the war on poverty, disease, & spiritual emptiness.

Compassionate Life Foundation (CLF) is a registered 501 (c)(3) nonprofit, non-denominational organization, seeking to be God's "hands and feet" showing love and compassion to the poor and needy people of the world. Donations are tax-deductible to the fullest extent allowed by law.
